Voters say 'yes' to ESPLOST

By Charles Duncan
North Georgia News
editor@nganews.com

Only supporters of the Education Special Purpose Local Option Sales Tax showed up at the Board of Elections Office on Hunt Martin Street Tuesday night.

The results renewed their faith in the spirit of Union County.

ESPLOST won, or rather, the voters of Union County scored their biggest win of the year.

Almost 2,000 voters turned out to cast ballots on the referendum that would extend the local penny sales tax for education by five years.

The final tally: 1,332 'yes' to 612 'no,' or 68.52 percent in favor of extending the sales tax for education.

"The affirmative vote to extend the education sales tax extends my faith in the people of Union County," said Union County Board of Education Chairman Gary Davenport. "This vote shows strong support for the children of this community. Even with a low voter turnout, this is still a huge win for the children of this community."

The first votes tallied gave a chilling feel to the hallway where supporters stood awaiting results.

Eleven votes against, two votes in favor were the results of absentee voting.

Early voting provided a renewed sense of excitement as 602 said 'yes' to 268 opposed.

Early voting set the tone for the rest of the night, as one-by-one, each precinct came in with an affirmative vote in support of the sales tax extension.

"This is huge," said BOE member Julie Barton. "This community has a history of supporting its children."

"Somebody had to help us as we were growing up, and we got that support," she said. "It only makes sense to do the same for the children of today."

Our fathers and grandfathers helped us, and what the voters said tonight is, we're going to help the children of tomorrow," Barton said.

The battle to renew the sales tax got underway early as the Union County Republican Party's Executive Committee asked voters to turn back the sales tax.

They submitted a press release to the North Georgia News, which was printed asking voters to vote 'no.'

They turned to a billboard campaign, again asking voters to dismiss the sales tax that supports education.

Tuesday night, voters spoke loud and clear about how they felt about education.

"This says a lot about our community," Davenport said.

"I'm glad our school board stayed united in this pursuit of extending the education sales tax."

"The voters spoke tonight," Barton said. "Education is absolutely a non-partisan issue."

ESPLOST Committee members Jason Karnes and Jim Williams agreed that the 'yes' vote speaks volumes about the Union County community.

"It shows that the citizens of Union County saw the importance of this sales tax, and I'm very proud that they showed their support," Karnes said. "Also, I'm thankful that the school board was so willing to be open about this issue."

"I think it's a victory for the children of our community," Williams said. "That's what this was really all about. This election showed a unified school board whose priority is doing what's best for the children of our community."

Union County Sole Commissioner Lamar Paris was all smiles.

"This shows that the majority of the county has the best interests of our children at heart," he said. "Our citizens should all feel proud, and now it is up to our school board, with continued input from the community, to wisely spend these ESPLOST funds. I have full confidence that they will be dedicated to that purpose."

"Congratulations to our citizens, our schools, our teachers, support personnel and above all, our children."

Scrap metal laws have changed

By Joe Collins
North Georgia News
Staff Writer

The state of Georgia has implemented a Secondary Metals Recycle registration program in an attempt to combat the theft and conversion of ferrous and non-ferrous metals for cash.

In English, it means retail metal recyclers must be documented by the state through the Sheriff's Offices throughout the state or face criminal penalties.

It's the state lawmakers' solution to the theft of metals from churches, homes, government entities and businesses.

The metals recycling industry, or more commonly referred to as scrap metal, has become very profitable and has gained very interest in the legal and illegal acquisition of profitable secondary use metals.

Unfortunately, the illegal acquisition of this recyclable resource has caused great harm to many individuals, churches, businesses and government entities through financial loss and destruction of property.

Saturday figures to be a lot of fun for hundreds of children at Meeks Park.

That's when the sky starts falling. Well, it may appear the sky is falling but, it's really hundreds of plastic Easter Eggs.

The fun begins at noon at Meeks Park ballfield as children ages 2-11 will watch from a safe distance as a helicopter drops hundreds of plastic eggs onto a field already covered with thousands of other eggs - 25,000 total - and then the children will be released to their age appropriate section to collect their portion of the Easter Eggs, said Duff Conley, director of Union County Parks and Recreation.

Sheriff: 'one charged in pill bust'

By Charles Duncan

A 15-month narcotics investigation by the Union County Sheriff's Office has yielded results.

Detected with the department arrested Gina Michelle Burnette, 40, of Blairsville, at her residence for several drug-related charges connected to the distribution of high-powered painkillers, Union County Sheriff Mack Mason said last week.

Detected served three arrest warrants on Burnette, Sheriff Mason said.

"We took some heavy-duty painkillers - several hundred - off the street," Sheriff Mason said. "It was some solid police work. If anyone hasn't noticed, we're sending a message that Union County is not the place to be dealing illegal drugs."

Two vehicles were seized along with the drugs,

Gina Michelle Burnette

the sheriff said.

Union County sheriff's Lt. Chad Deyton and Detective Tyler Miller made the bust, Sheriff Mason said.

"They put a lot of man-hours into this bust," the sheriff said. "There were several hundred painkillers discovered during this operation. They had a street value of approximately $50 a pill.

"Deyton and Miller took about $20,000 worth of high-powered drugs off the street," Sheriff Mason said. "We'd like to say it's all in a day's work, but a lot of work went into this case."

Allegedly, Burnette was dealing the high-powered narcotics locally at a cost of $50 a pill, detectives said.

During the bust, the detectives discovered approximately 400 Oxycodone, Opanas, and Roxycodone, the sheriff said.

Detective Miller opened the case in December 2011 and vetted details of the operation the entire time.

Burnette was charged with four counts of distribution of a Schedule II controlled substance; five counts of possession of a Schedule II controlled substance with intent to distribute; and one count
